Document 2: JP, 11-339009, A (Sony Corp.), 10 December, 1999. Par. No. [0028] (Family: none).

Document 3: EP, 820788, A2 (Kabushiki Kaisha Asobou's), 28 January, 1998 & US, 6071002, A & JP, 9-313660, A.

The inventions described in claims 1 to 20 are disclosed in none of the documents cited in the ISR and appear to possess novelty and involve an inventive step.

In particular, the documents cited in the ISR do not disclose a image recognizing device providing "a hit time information determination section for determining the time at which the use tool hits on the basis of the hiding start time at which the use tool is judged to have changed from being in a unhidden state by the object to a hidden state and the hiding stop time at which the use tool is judged to have changed from being in a hidden state by the object to an unhidden state" and "an image content recognizing section for recognizing the image content including the motion of a player represented by the video information on the basis of the video information acquired by the video information acquiring section, the position of the use tool at the hit time rule information storage section, and the rule information stored in the rule information storage section" and this feature could not have easily been conceived by a person skilled in the art based on those documents.
